Princesses, Castles, Enchanted Forests and Dragons – Exploring (Eco) Destination Wedding Consumption

Denise Conroy, The University of Auckland, New Zealand
Rachel Wolfgramm, The University of Auckland, New Zealand
Sian Coleman, The University of Auckland, New Zealand

We explore consumers’ commitment to holding a destination wedding, and whether sustainability concerns motivate this decision in any way. Our intention is to develop theory that expands our understanding of how perceived meanings of destination weddings are formed within consumer culture, and the role identity plays in transformative consumer behaviour.

[to cite]:

[url]:
http://www.acrwebsite.org/volumes/1014622/volumes/v41/NA-41

[copyright notice]:
This work is copyrighted by The Association for Consumer Research. For permission to copy or use this work in whole or in part, please contact the Copyright Clearance Center at http://www.copyright.com/.
We explore consumers’ commitment to holding a destination wedding, and whether sustainability concerns motivate this decision in any way. Our intention is to develop theory that expands our understanding of how perceived meanings of destination weddings are formed within consumer culture, and the role identity plays in transformative consumer behaviour.